PROJECTS

Cyber Crime Detection using Machine Learning Techniques

Description:
Developed a machine learning model to address cybercrime cases with a lack of available data beforehand. Utilized Python to create an effective solution for identifying and analyzing cyber threats. Implemented classification algorithms to predict potential cybercriminal activities, contributing to enhancing cybersecurity measures.

In this project, I worked on utilizing machine learning techniques to tackle real-world challenges in cybercrime detection. I employed Python as the primary language to develop and train the model. The goal was to identify potential cyber threats and predict malicious activities through classification algorithms. By applying my analytical and programming skills, I successfully contributed to improving cybersecurity practices.

As a fresher, this project exemplifies my ability to work on relevant and cutting-edge topics while applying programming languages and machine learning concepts effectively. It showcases my dedication to addressing real-world issues and my passion for learning and implementing new technologies.
